

Barrister joins College as lecturer – Commercial Litigation Degree commences in August

Experienced barrister joins lecturing staff at The College of Law

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Sydney, 8 May 2009

Commercial litigation barrister Lachlan Menzies has been appointed as a new lecturer for The College of Law's Applied Law Commercial Litigation program, which begins in August.

Students completing the full Program are awarded a Master of Applied Law (Commercial Litigation). Students can also choose to study at Graduate Certificate and Graduate Diploma level.

Menzies, a past graduate of The College of Law, will provide crucial knowledge and skills for practitioners, teaching a course that has been developed and overseen by a Course Advisory Panel comprising judges, senior practitioners and academics.

The course was accredited at higher education level by the New South Wales Department of Education and Training in December 2008 after having undergone a process of rigorous assessment.

Menzies has 13 years' experience in commercial litigation and has been a Barrister in NSW since 2003. He holds a Masters in Law from the University of Sydney.

Joe Catanzariti, Chair, The College of Law, welcomed Menzies to the role.

"The College is delighted to add Commercial Litigation to its growing portfolio of Applied Law Programs. We believe in the value of postgraduate education and will continue to build our programs in this area. This course and Lachlan's involvement in it come as a timely enhancement to our students' knowledge in such volatile commercial/corporate times".

Menzies has also worked as a staff member at the University of New England School of Law.
